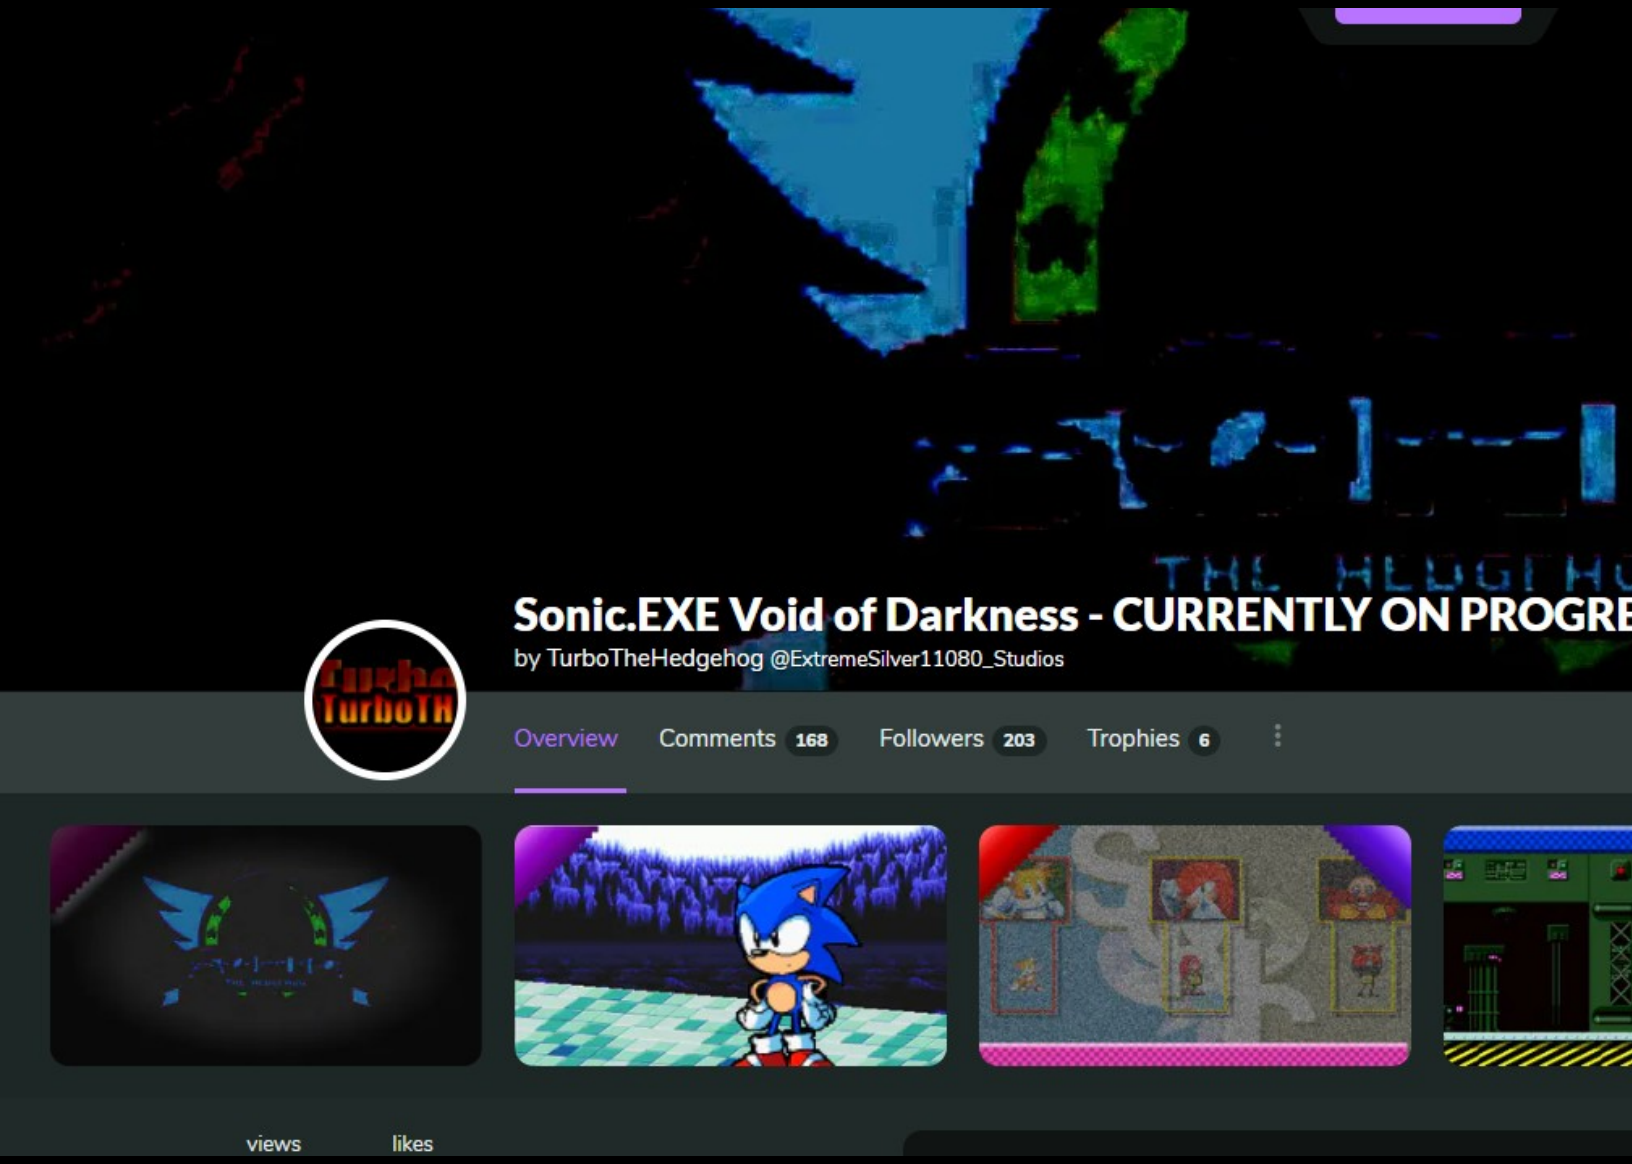
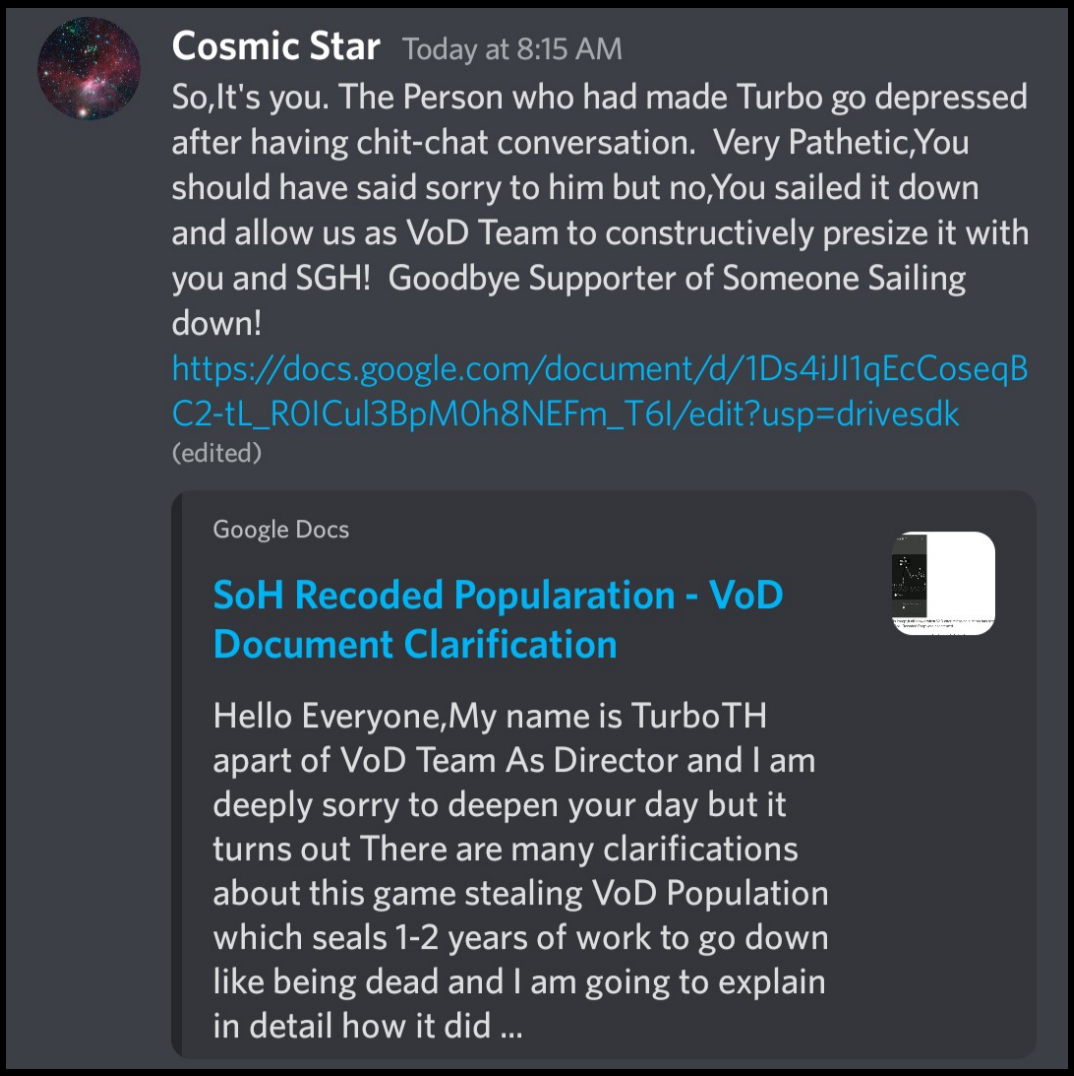
Hello there, today we will be discussing about Turbo the Hedgehog and his true colors.

If you don’t know who Turbo the Hedgehog (formerly known under the username “ExtremeSilver11080”) is, he’s a recolor Sonic who is a developer of “Sonic.EXE: Void of Darkness” (though, as we’ll explain a little later, the developer part is a bit overselling it) and “Metal Sonic Apparition” (a Sonic bootleg of Greenlight’s The Power Star Archives).



At first you'll see he's a basic Sonic.EXE fan game creator, but that's only on surface level. In reality, on the inside, he's nothing but a toxic manipulative teen.

As of recently, he's been jealous of the increasing popularity of Sonic.EXE Spirits of Hell RECODED ever since teasers for it came out, to the point where SGH got banned from the VOD Dev Server. One of the members of RECODED (who shall remain anonymous for their privacy) had confronted Turbo about it. Afterwards, a username named "Cosmic Star", which was later renamed to "Sonic.EXE VoD Team Account", messaged the RECODED team member with a harmful act as seen here:

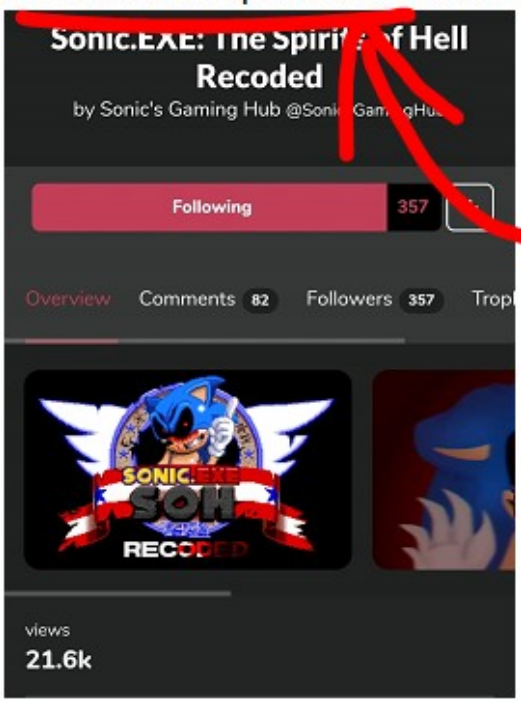


As you can see from this screenshot, there was clear bitter resentment against all of GoldCodeX for “stealing popularation”, despite Turbo claiming to the contrary. Soon after that, Turbo just ended his friendship with the anonymous team member, even though they were trying to help him, and made up the excuse that they “made him cry”, which was actually the other way around.

He even made up the pettiest excuses for his actions, claiming the user was “pity-partying” and simply seeking fame, when the reality is the EXACT opposite used to clear his name of all guilt.

In the doc Cosmic Star sent, he deleted it, but we’ve managed to save some screenshots from what was there before the doc was deleted. Even afterwards, Turbo STILL didn’t stop spreading this misinformation towards the user who tried to ignore him afterwards.

Initially, The Director of SoH Recoded, Sonic's Gaming Hub, has been caught for stealing ALL Amount Popularation in which VoD Got Into as before.



To debunk this, none of the RECODED team had anything to do with trying to gain popularity. Ever since the teaser trailer came out, popularity and hype started to spread anyway, especially since the Spirits of Hell games are popular already.

Well, BECAUSE he was promoting the game everywhere and even in his GameJolt Profile showing Disrespect to VoD Team Members especially promoting VoD Full Game's Release Date as before it was announced.!

To clarify, there was no attempted disrespect in mind, since the team was just trying to get the teasers out there as needed. Plus, all of SoH Recoded is a passion project made for fun.

P.S: The Reason why I have to make this document is because the SoH Recoded Team has been driving me really aggressively in negative terms and without having an apology,I want to move on from the thing and let this know so everyone can understand completely of what Sonic's Gaming Hub has done to me and to VoD Team. So Please Consider this as serious and understand all relatable topics here mentioned in the article.

Thanks for Coming here to read this document,I am really sorry if everyone feels uncomfortable after reading what he has done to me and I am really sick of letting it go sailing from the chances that it's really GIVEN to him!

Directed towards the RECODED team members, this would soon be the downfall of Turbo the Hedgehog and "Sonic.EXE: Void of Darkness". As of recently, there had been claims Turbo had made of himself getting hacked and the Cosmic Star account, when in reality, it was all staged as an excuse for him to get away with his actions.

Turbo the Hedgehog Today at 9:11 AM can ya talk?

[redacted] Today at 9:12 AM what?
im trying to work
and just woke up

Turbo the Hedgehog Today at 9:15 AM oh
i am sorry
just wanted to check on you a bit
And I wanted to tell ya something.
not sure if you will read the message.

[redacted] Today at 9:16 AM what is it

Turbo the Hedgehog Today at 9:16 AM well
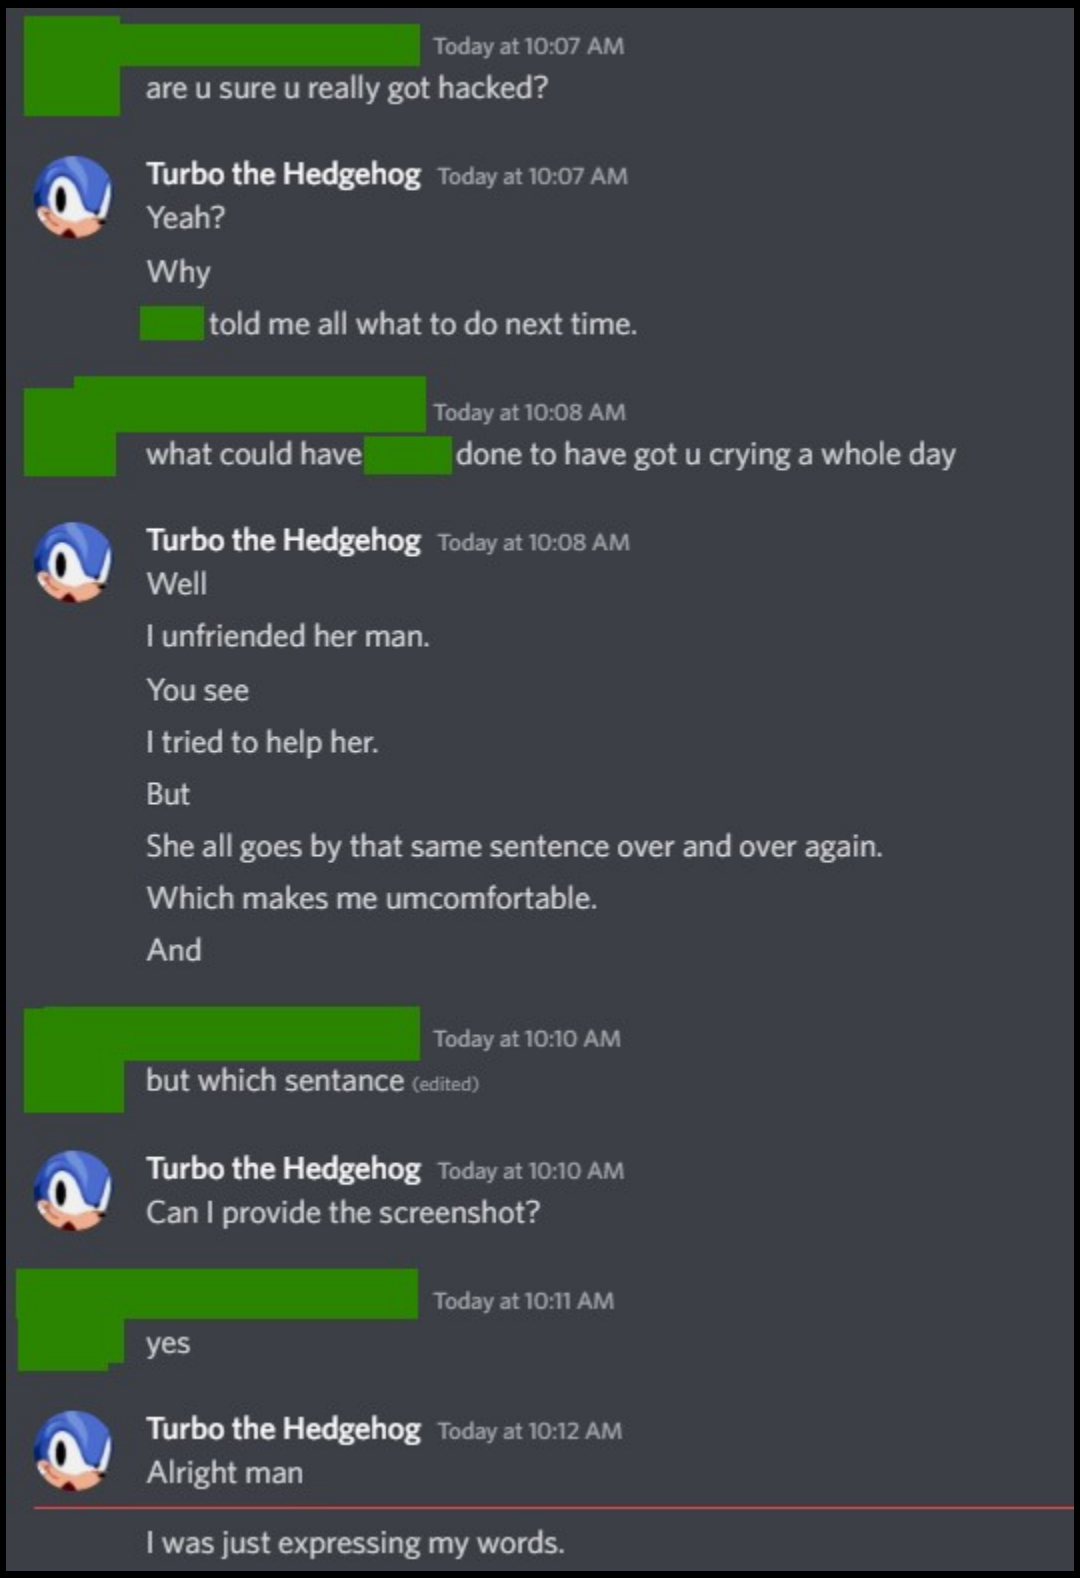
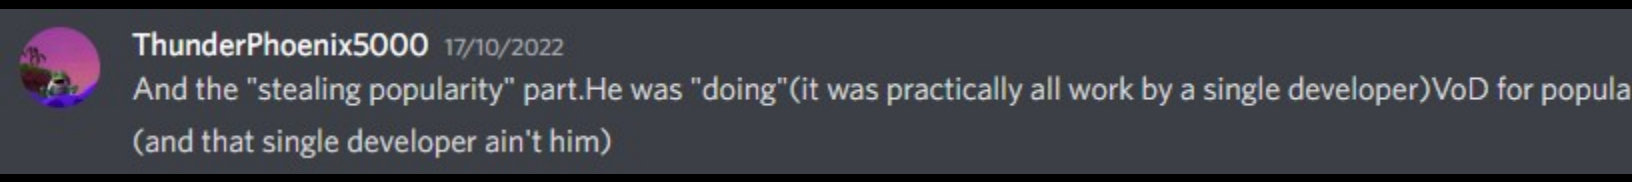
It's about [redacted] As nowby known part of Recoded Team.
I ended up unfriending her for some personal reasons.
It is not about the key of being part.
No
It is about that she done something to me.
In case if she mentions me,She can contact me again.
Believe me [redacted]
It's really sad.
Because she made me cry WHOLE day and I couldn't take it,I am not hating her man.



He started to avoid the question of him being actually hacked, which had given signs that something is up.

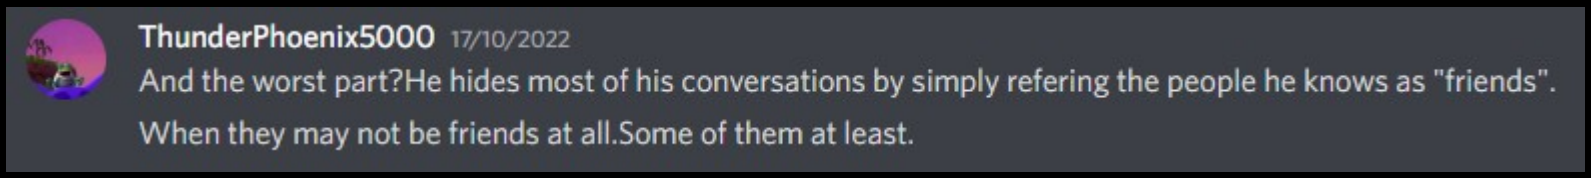
Other dodgy signs had come up long before this as well. Earlier in the year, he was dating a user named “ElectricSakura16”, though this bond went downwards after Turbo’s brother, ThunderPhoenix5000, encouraged her to leave him. This was not the end of it, though, as he repeatedly lied about her and even voiced the idea of attacking her and her supporters through his game. It’s clear to say that Sakura was very upset over Turbo being manipulative to her.

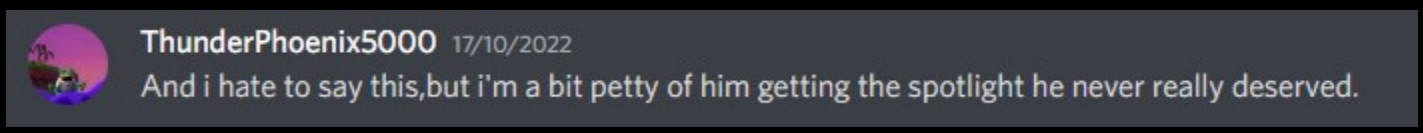
Needless to say, Thunder was not pleased to hear that his own brother was doing this all behind his back, which is the big parallel between the two; while Turbo is a manipulative liar, Thunder is genuinely friendly and outgoing as a person. He also revealed some important information concerning Turbo and “Void of Darkness”.

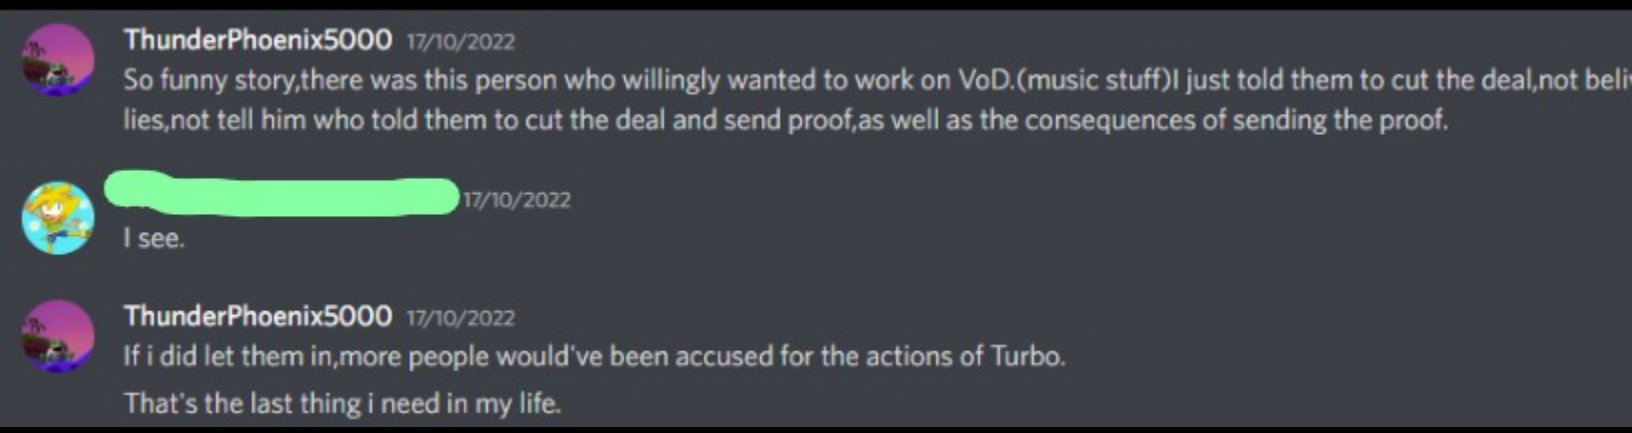


The biggest red flag revealed was that “Void of Darkness” AND “Metal Sonic Apparition” were solely made to hog all the fame, NOT as passion projects, and what’s more, Turbo did little to no actual development on the games himself (at least, nothing that Thunder ever saw).

When Turbo was talking to Mr Pixel, the developer of Sonic.EXE: One Last Round, when the latter was in an emotional breakdown about his work, nothing good came out of it. For instance, exact words from another user were copied over into Turbo’s messages, he acted bossy about the matter, and worse, he tried asking for the game’s source code, under the lie that he’d “help finish OLR”. You can already guess where that would’ve gone had Mr Pixel not refused this offer.

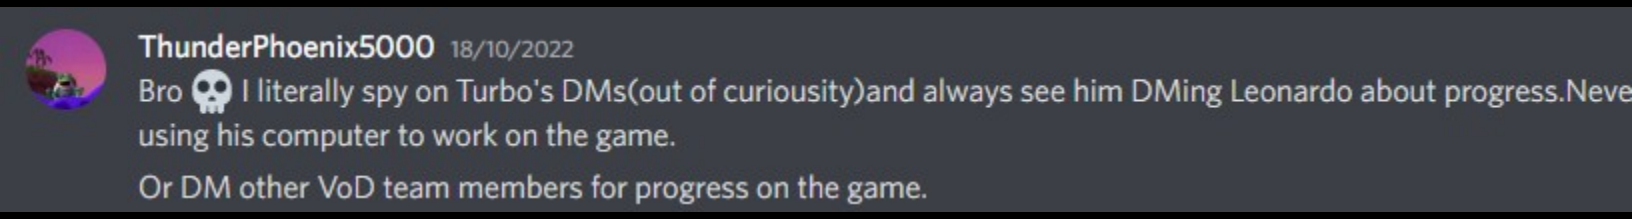






Thunder was also working in private to slow down VoD's progress by ensuring team members who didn't know what they were getting into backed out of Turbo's plans for their safety. Oh, and as for that "Cosmic Star" account? Thunder revealed that it is actually an alt account made by Turbo mainly used to guilt-trip others for no reason.

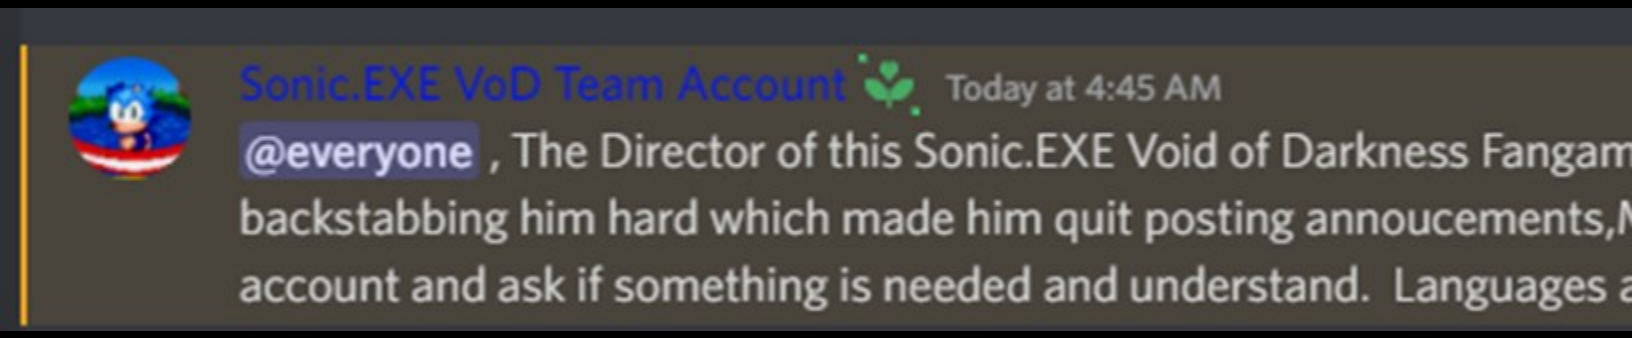
His claims about YouTuber "Blantados" running the account are also false, since the actual YouTuber in question is more commonly known for his work on "BETADCIU" covers for indie game Friday Night Funkin', and has never voiced any part in the "Void of Darkness" project.



Even more so, Thunder made it clear that he had not seen Turbo work on the game OR message other team members concerning his game's progress, which is clearly a sign of an unhealthy team.

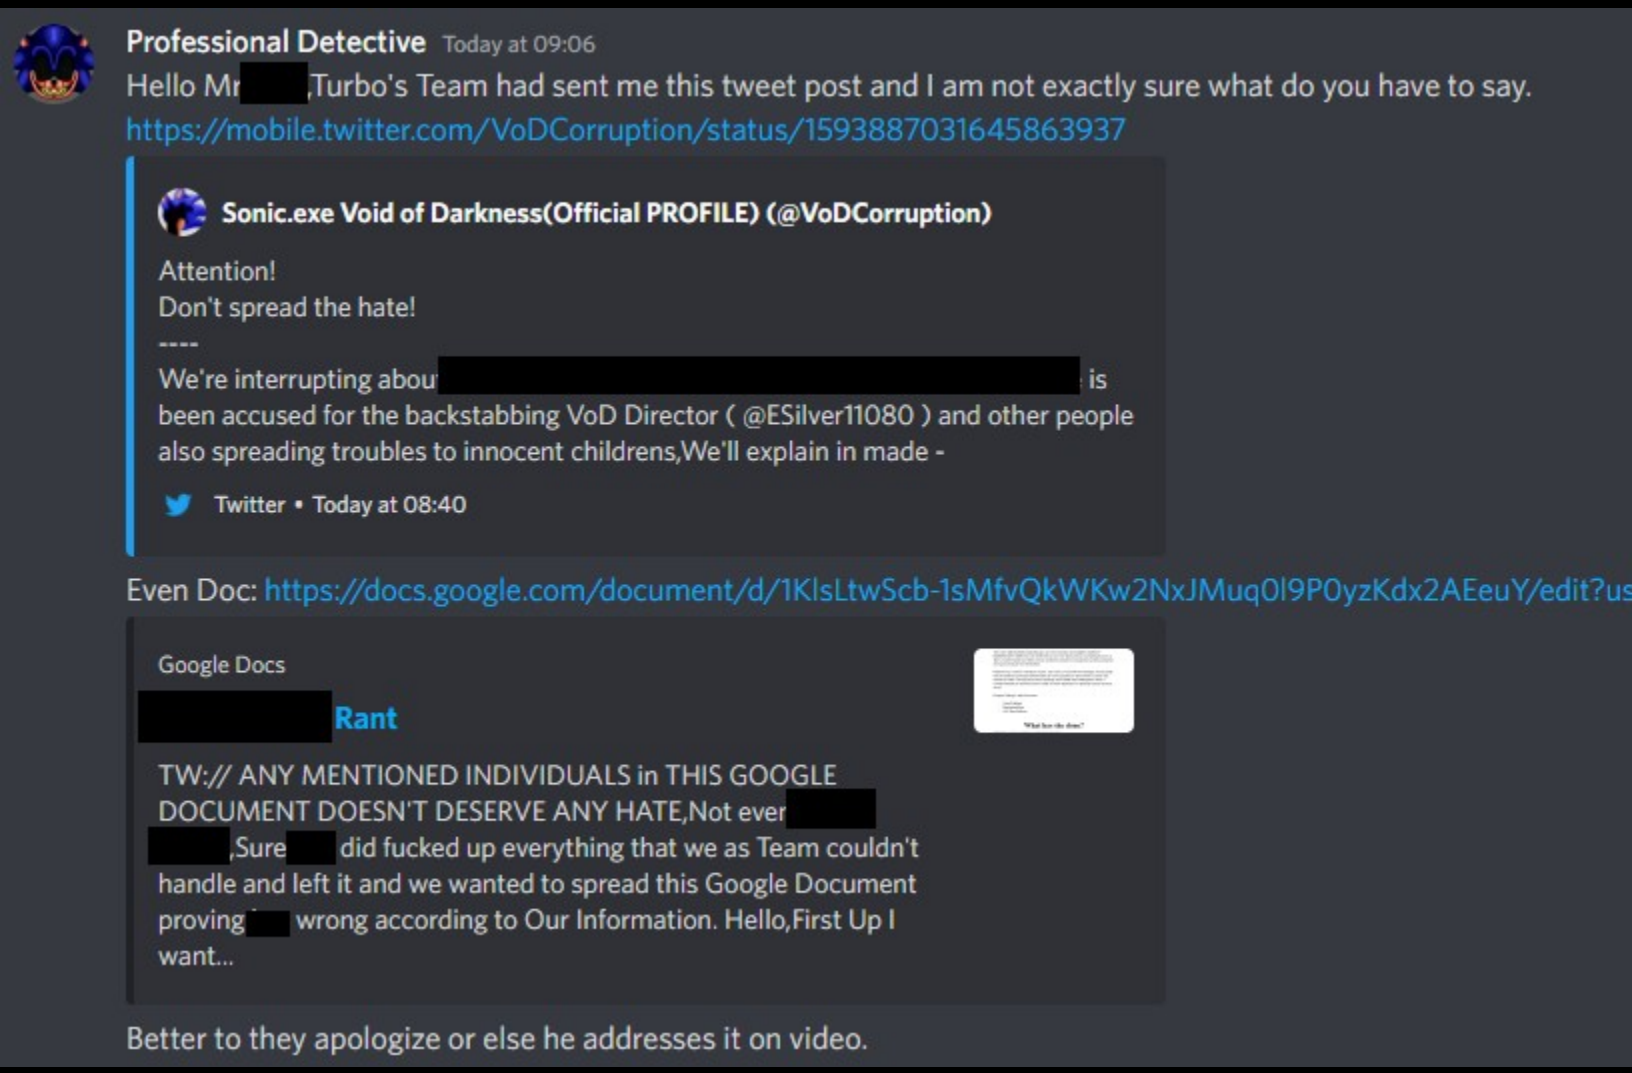
Concerning Turbo's "getting hacked" situation, he made up a lot of blatant excuses for it, such as links directly hacking him (which is clearly impossible and needs an external program to do such a thing) and blaming anyone who supports ElectricSakura for the alleged hacking.

He has also been known to spread misinformation concerning people who had blocked him for various reasons, mainly due to having had enough of his nonsense.



As you can see here, the alt account is being used to spread this misinformation and fool people into thinking Turbo is in the right with his claims. Anyone affected by Turbo's actions and are being targeted by his claims should make explaining that this is misinformation a high priority.

Sometime after this, Turbo contacted people with yet ANOTHER alt account, this being "Professional Detective", just being used to further attack the anonymous person. The account also quickly blocks a user after sending them these things so they can't fight back, which is alarming.



Later on, he began development on a game dubbed “Metal Sonic Apparition”, a bootleg of Greenlight’s The Power Star Archives ARG, specifically its Wario Apparition: Corrupted Data half, that somehow got into the top 10 in the Luigikid EXE Challenge, though barely missed the top 3. It literally just steals ideas from multiple creators, and screenshots shown in the tweets below will show exactly where he stole those ideas from, despite claiming to the contrary. And it just so happens he learned nothing about doing any game work himself.

https://twitter.com/luigimariotwity/status/1605327732526972928 + https://twitter.com/luigimariotwity/status/1610576819820068869 (All screenshots from here, as well as those calling out the stolen ideas from Sonic.RIBS, Sonic.EXE: One Last Round and other sources)

All the sources he stole from for his “game” are:

- The Power Star Archives itself (being a direct bootleg of it)
- Sonic.EXE One Last Round (the warning screen and Metal’s programming)
- Sonic.EXE Forever by Sonic’s Gaming Hub (the idea of a Special Stage)

- And by extension, Genesis Sonic Worlds (for using the Sonic Retro screen and not giving credit)
- SonicPC / SONIC (PC Port) by JoeDoughBoi and John-Kun (the face closeup with the hands)
- Sonic.RIBS by RabbitX (for the shots of other corpses of Tails, which has since been removed)
- Sonic Limited Edition: The Lost Cartridge by JordanGaming101 (for the brief idea of Tails's namesake being torn off)
- Sonic.ERR (Classic) (for Tails's face being clawed in at the end of his route)

Even after that, Turbo STILL* continued lying about the anonymous user, even claiming to consult some "lawyer" about the matter just to upset the user further. Also, whenever someone calls him out for his actions, he pulls a dumb act like "why is everyone mean 2 me!" to try and act all innocent, but don't fall for the bait. He can't get a lawyer to sue that user for multiple reasons, including the fact that NO doxxing was involved in the first place, and he has no evidence to claim otherwise. Even if he really was getting some lawyer, he'd quickly get arrested for abusing court trials.

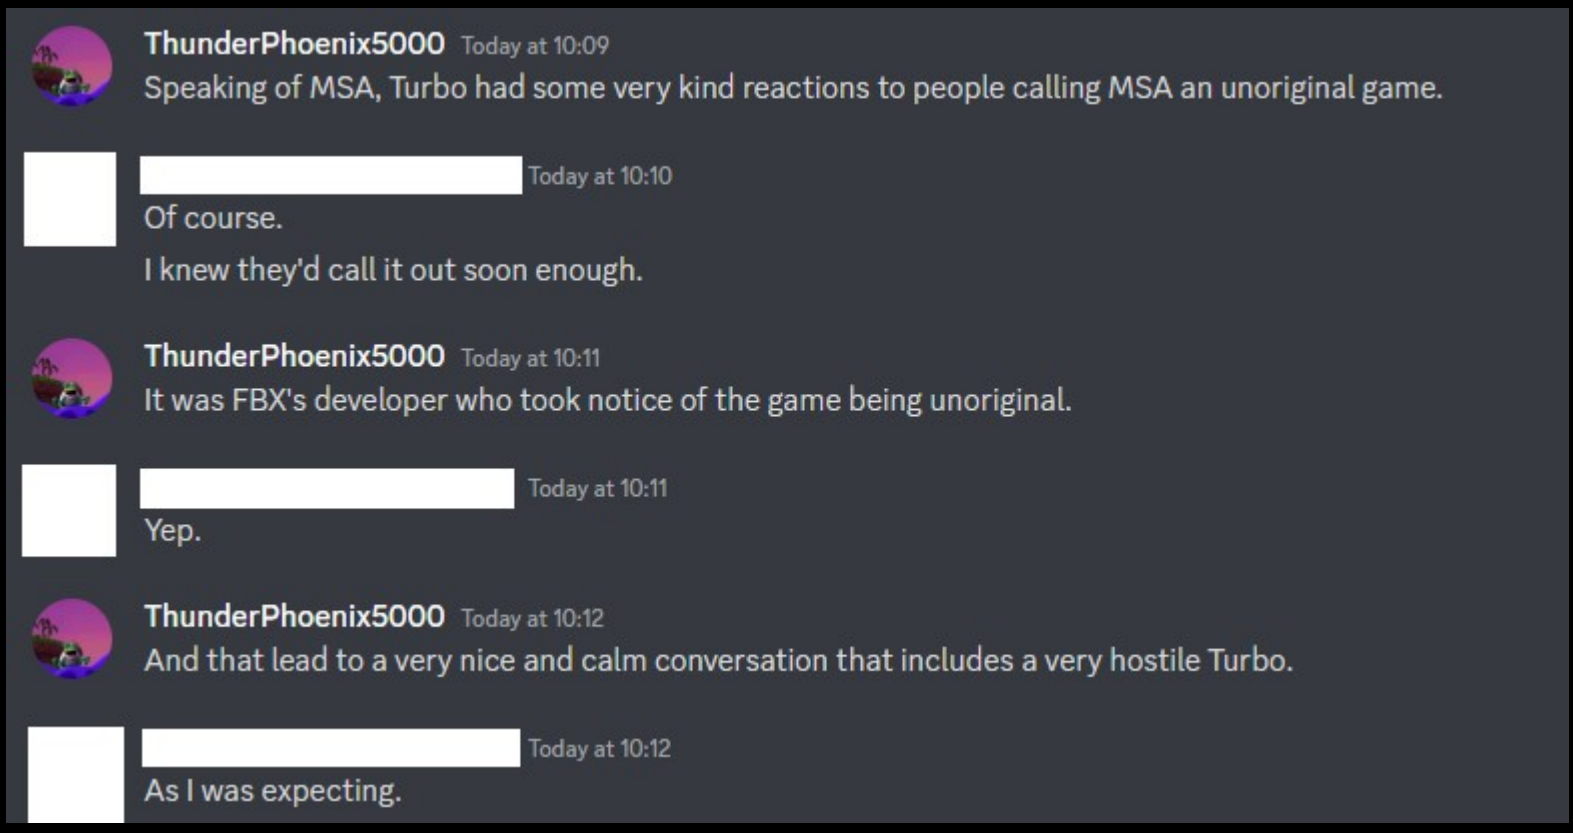
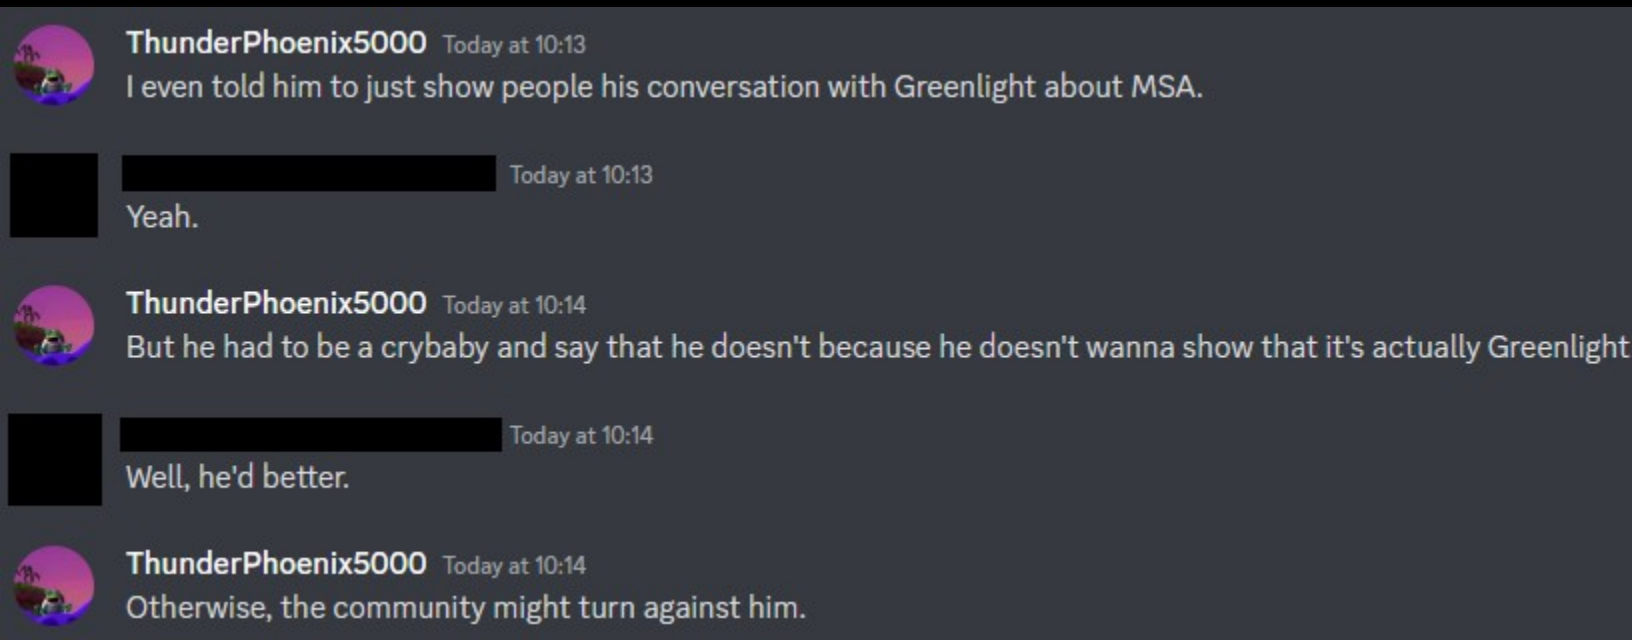
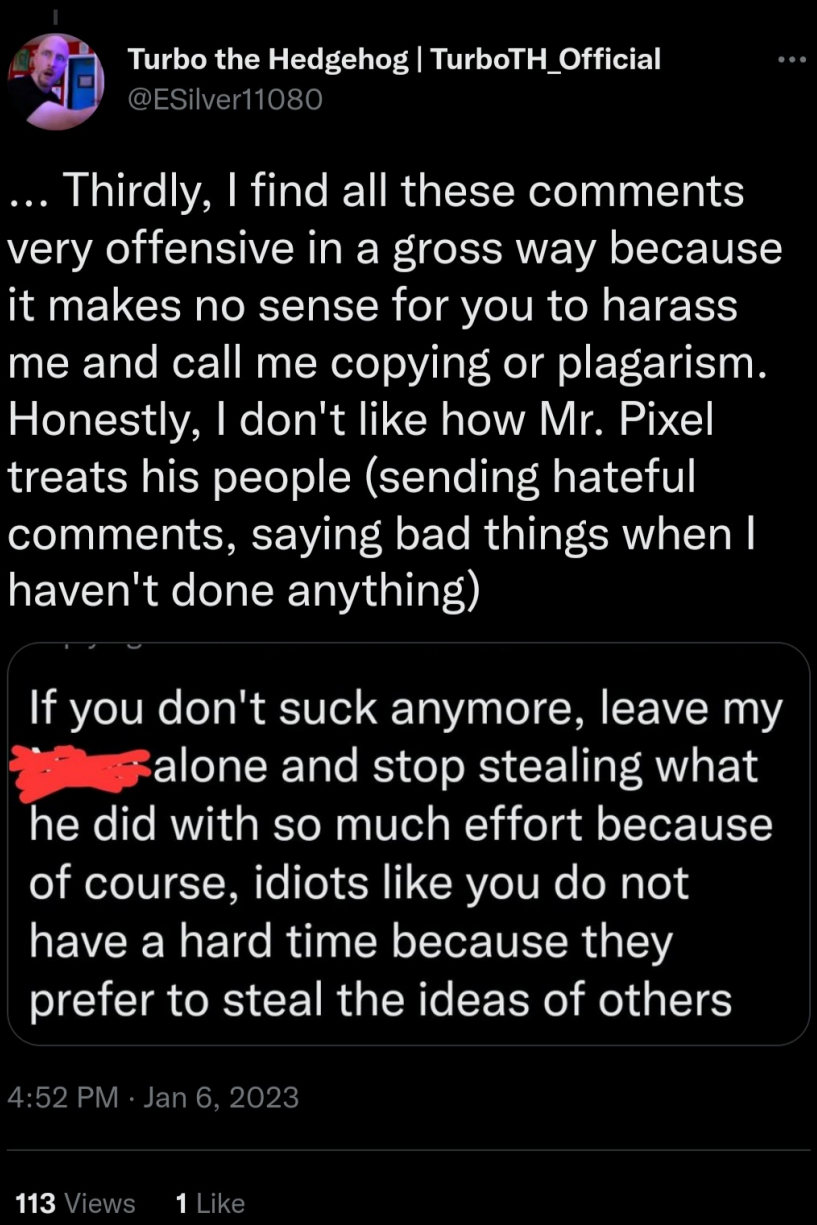
He made an even bigger fool of himself after AlyisWeaver, the developer of Sonic.FBX, alongside other users, called Turbo out for stealing other people's ideas for his game, and, of course, he responded negatively to this. Thunder even tried to get Turbo to show his conversation with Greenlight, but he acted all crybaby-like and refused to do so, due to not wanting to show the reality of the situation. This is inevitably going to lead to more people turning against him. Oh, and to add insult to injury, he was called out for it in Luigikid's server of all places, where countless people, including Luigikid himself, could see his childish acts.

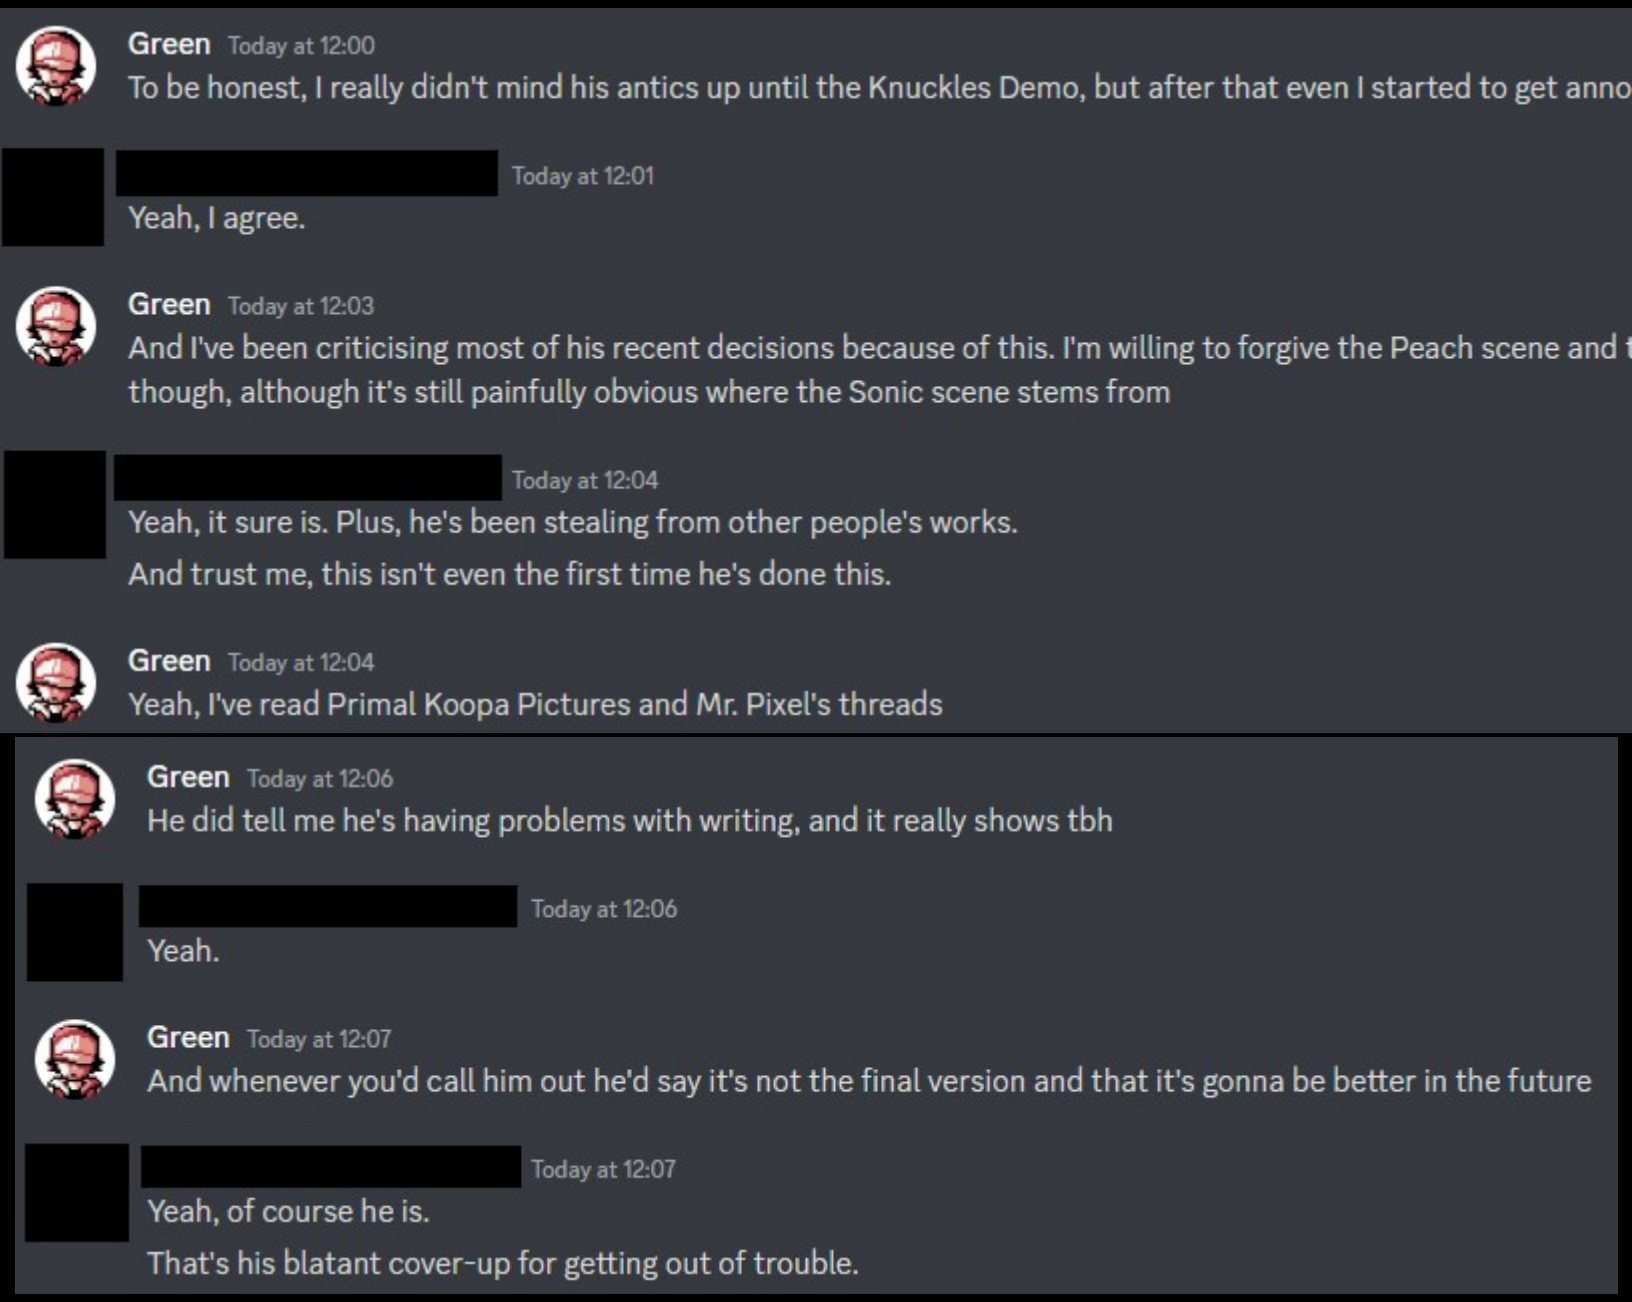




And even following that, he STILL hasn't stopped with stealing other people's ideas, constantly claiming to the contrary, and even talked foul of Mr. Pixel AND his partner for calling him out, especially considering that he even stole some ideas from One Last Round. Effectively, he's the Smashinity of the EXE community, constantly stealing ideas and claiming them to be his own or so-called "inspiration".



Greenlight himself has since been consulted about the matter involving Turbo, admitting that even he got fed up with his tricks as time went on. And while he did excuse the Peach scene and Wario level copies, he knew it would be all too obvious where the stuff came from. He especially got annoyed with it following the release of the Knuckles demo, mentioning to one user about Turbo's acts and how he'd always pretend he'd fix things up for the game whenever called out.



And worse, Turbo renamed one of his accounts into one used for slander and lies against Pico Digital Studios himself, demonstrating his pettiness quite well. Pico himself has had to make a tweet debunking the claims made against him, and needless to say, he wasn't happy with this.

In summary, while Turbo may seem like a nice person on the outside, he's selfish on the inside, always aiming to get his own way no matter what it takes. I do not encourage any attacks on him, but do not interact with him and block him as soon as you get the chance. Recognise the speech patterns he uses consistently and know when he’s planning to make you his “friend”, and do not let him deceive you into believing any lies he spreads.
